Goose, Flock, Pond: The implications of counterintuitive work environments

WEBEX support generously sponsored by:

What Will We Be Discussing?

Building a culture of leadership with healthy team dynamics is no easy feat. When it comes to emergencies - there is no time for misunderstandings, and added unnecessary stress. Our guest speaker, Warren Barry will help our teams look at intuition and individual strengths and how they can benefit the team and ultimately, the people we serve. Warren has over 20 years of experience in healthcare, and business and helps bring insights to employees, employers, and human resource professionals alike. We will discuss why people behave the way they do, how you can lead them more effectively, and how you can create a more dynamic team and culture in your workplace.

Who will be Speaking?

Warren Barry is an award-winning pioneer in the field of human resources who studies the implications of counterintuitive work environments on individuals and organizations as a whole. With "Duck, Duck, Goose" Warren teaches teams how to accept their individuality, and how to work together as a united front.

In his presentation, Warren helps teams unlock their internal potential, the risks and costs of cognitive stress. A member and speaker for TEC Canada, Warren has conducted presentations across the country for a variety of organizations. Focused on building healthy workplace environments by embracing one's self and others, and exploring the connection between chronic pain and working counter-intuitively. Are you ready to build an engaged, connected team? Join us on Wednesday, January 17, 2018
